 NOTE : Had L&L w/ Dr. Klumpp and staff. They were very appreciative and friendly including Dr. Klumpp. She sd that she does treat children 99% of the time. Most children are 12 and older. I asked if the indication was important to her. She sd for the most part no...sometime pharmacists give her a hard time. SD that she has been using LX more lately sd that she usually waits 6 mnth before using any new drug esp if she is prescribing off label. She REALLY like the d2d profile and low protein binding. She attended the grand rounds I sponsored in Nov. and this was the topic and she really liked it. She sd she thinks its odd that Zol. has the childhood indication but isn't as clean as LX or CX in d2d or side effect. Talked about using Lx in conjunction w/ Strattera she really liked that and sold against Proz, and Pax for those pts b/c of 2d6. Sold Lx as safe effective low maintenance for her pts. She was also happy to hear about the liquid formula. I asked if I could bring them luch once a month and talk and she agreed. I really think we will see her get on board, she is now comfortable using w/ the success she has had and other success stories. NCO: Take it slow w/ her shes not so bad if you just read her, she knows the info on LX, take her things she really appreciates anything.

 NOTE : She said LX is going very well and I reiterated that LX is a great choice for children because it is so safe. Reminded her of liquid suspension so she could go as low as 2.5 mg. Left a file card and note reminding her that 1/2 tsp. = 2.5 mg. and it is sugar free and peppermint taste.

 NOTE : good call, gives me time when i call ahead. he asked about lex and pediatric use re: the recent probs with teens in europe on pax. told him that cel had some data, and logically if cel was safe lex should be better. offered to have the study sent but he said no time to read. i hadit sent to me to read and tell about next time. i closed him on lex for teens, said he had no reservations about using it.

 NOTE : followed up on Bill's call and dosing of LX- Dr P said he sees alot on children with anxiety and uses a "pediatric dose" asked what that really is-- said very small dosing "suboptimal" asked what he uses for zoloff-said abt 10-15mg---asked how he gets -said all his patients have pill cutters-- went over that LX has peppermint liquid,5 mg dosing and 10and 20mg. it was as if Dr P had never been told able the 5mg dosing--and showed him the 10mg is scored to get 5mg and he said they can cut that. Went into gad-goodman to focus on how sensitive with anxiety these patients are-- LX worked for them. Discussed the "pediatric" indication issue again with him-said it didn't matter he uses everything off label. Asked with this information now-is there anything that will hold him back from rxing-said no and at this time of year with everyone going back to school-spearation anxiety is very high and LX will rx'ed for them, Ran into DR W in hall-invited him and DR P to NM dinner-they are both interested in learning more.

 NOTE : Discussed the article about off-label use of medications. Specifically asked about his concern with use of Lexapro in children. He said that he has no issue with using Lx in kids, especially due to the fact that so few other SSRIs have a pediatric indication and both Effexor and Paxil have pediatric warnings in Europe. He feel that Lx is actually the safest choice available. Asked him to speak to Dr. Villaneuva about this matter, because he was showing some concern.
